Planning Ahead

Things to Consider

At the time of a death, the people responsible for your funeral arrangements can be very distressed and not in a state to make decisions and arrangements. It is possible to assist them by having details of your funeral requirements documented.

This “Planning Ahead” guide is divided into two sections. The first deals with your funeral wishes, the second with the information required by law for the registration of the death by the Registrar of Birth, Deaths and Marriages.

Once completed this form may be sent to Anton Brown Funerals for safe storage until required or you may keep it in a safe place, stored with your other private papers. Please advise your Next of Kin of this paperwork and its location.

FLOWERS
Casket Spray	A casket spray is placed upon the lid of the coffin during the service. These are available in your favourite fresh flowers in your special colours , or available in Australian Natives. Please make a note on the pre arrangement form as to your special colours or flower types.
Single	If you do not want a large arrangement of flowers you can elect for a single rose, or a smaller wreath for placing on the coffin. Flowers are definitely a personal choice you can make to personalise your funeral arrangements.
Donations	These days many people are selecting the option of donations to charity instead of flowers. This wish can be shown in the newspaper notice informing people of the funeral, for example “Donations in Lieu of flowers to the Queensland Cancer Fund would be appreciated.”
